Introduction: The Domain of Business Process & Analysis

Business Process & Analysis', or 'BPA', is a discipline that allows an organization to understand what an organization does and how it does it. By visualizing processes, a company can identify opportunities for process efficiency and effectiveness, pricing costs and reaction time to rapid market change.

Key Stakeholders in Business Process & Analysis

Business Analyst	Business Process Architect	Business Architecture	Enterprise Architect
Change Manager	Project Coordinator	Project Manager	Chief Information Officer

What are the Business Benefits?

- Visualization - BPA can be used to create visual representations of business processes that can be internalized and understood by the wider stakeholder community
- Optimization - Improved understanding of business's processes and how they fit together
- Weak points - Highlights areas that are creating bottlenecks or wasting resources
- Savings - Improvements made through BPA can lead to significant savings in terms of time and money - leading to greater ROIs for strategic initiatives
- Change - Organizations must adapt rapidly in the face of unforeseen challenges; BPA accommodates rapid and effective change management
